The Measure of a Black Life?: A Poetic Interpretation of Hope and Discontent

Lisa William-White¹

1) Department of Graduate and Professional Studies, California State University Sacramento (CSUS), United States of America.

Date of publication: June 28th, 2013

To link this article: http://dx.doi.org/10.4471/qre.2013.23

PLEASE SCROLL DOWN FOR ARTICLE

The terms and conditions of use are related to the Open Journal System and to Creative Commons Non-Commercial and Non-Derivative License.
The Measure of a Black Life?:
A Poetic Interpretation of Hope and Discontent

Lisa William-White
California State University Sacramento

Abstract

Here, Spoken Word poetics (William-White, 2011a, 2011b; William-White & White, 2011; William-White, 2013) is utilized here to interpret and reflect on racialized violence and homicide in the United States. African American youth, particularly in urban communities, are disproportionately affected by violent crime, namely homicide when compared to other racial/ethnic groups. The impact of violence is heart-wrenching for families and communities; it undermines notions of personal and community safety, freedom, and equality within and between communities. It erodes the ideals of democracy in our country, particularly when racialized violence is under reported in the media, or ignored by media; and, when such violence is inadequately addressed by, or perpetrated at the hands of, law enforcement. As a performance narrative, this piece asks the question: How do we create communities of care, spaces for understanding and empathy, and utilize communities as sites for consciousness raising about the systems that perpetuate inequalities in the lives of people? This piece probes this question, and trumpets a call to end rampant violence in urban communities, promote safety and foster agency in ways that is responsive to the needs and interests of all citizens.

Keywords: performance narrative, spoken word poetics, African Americans, violent crime ¿La Medida de una Vida de la Comunidad Negra? Una Interpretación Poética de la Esperanza y el Malestar

Lisa William-White
California State University Sacramento

Resumen
Aquí, la Palabra Poética hablada (William-White, 2011a, 2011b; William-White y White, 2011, William-White, 2013) se utiliza para interpretar y reflexionar sobre la violencia racial y el homicidio en los Estados Unidos. Los jóvenes Afroamericanos, especialmente en las comunidades urbanas, se ven desproporcionadamente afectados por la delincuencia con violencia, es decir homicidios, en comparación con otros grupos raciales/étnicos. El impacto de la violencia no sólo es desgarradora para las familias y las comunidades, sino que socava la percepción individual y social de seguridad, libertad, e igualdad dentro y entre la comunidad. Esto erosiona los ideales de democracia en nuestro país, sobre todo cuando la violencia racial es informada en los medios de comunicación, o es ignorada por los mismos; y cuando esa violencia es inadecuadamente tratada, o considerada en la aplicación de la ley. Como narrativa performativa, esta obra se plantea la pregunta: ¿Cómo podemos crear comunidades de apoyo, espacios para la comprensión y la empatía, y utilizar las comunidades como espacios para tomar conciencia sobre los sistemas que perpetúan las desigualdades en la vida de las personas? Esta obra sondea esta pregunta, y enuncia un llamamiento para poner fin a la violencia extendida en las comunidades urbanas, promoviendo la seguridad y la colaboración institucional, de respondiendo a las necesidades e intereses de los ciudadanos.

Palabras clave: tarea narrativa performativa, Palabra Poética hablada, Afroamericanos, crímenes violentos

2013 Hipatia Press
ISSN 2014-6418
DOI: 10.4471/qre.2013.23
Data on Black homicide rates magnify a disconcerting reality for the United States. According to a United States Justice Department report, the homicide rate has increased steadily since the 1950s, had peaked in the 1980s and early 1990s before experiencing a decline (9.3 homicides per 100,000 in 1992 to 4.8 homicides per 100,000 in 2010); and has remained relatively constant\(^1\).

Blacks are only 12.6 of the US population\(^2\), yet were disproportionately represented as both homicide and victims and offenders. Data from 1980 to 2008 suggests that the victimization rate for Blacks is 27.8 per 100,000 people. The offending rate for blacks is 34.4 per 1000,000; and, males represented 77% of homicide victims and nearly 90% of offenders. The victimization rate for males (11.6 per 100,000) was three times higher than the rate for females (3.4 per 100,000). Approximately a third (34%) of murder victims and almost half (49% of offenders were under the age of 25). For both victims and offenders, the rate peaked in the 18-24 year-old age group at 17.1 victims per 100,000 and 29.3 offenders.

The homicide victimization rates for teens and young adults also prove disconcerting. The same report states that the homicide rate for teens (14 to 17 years old) increased almost 150% from 4.9 homicides per 100,000 in 1985, and remained stable through 2008. In 2008, young adults (18 to 24 years old) experienced the highest homicide victimization rate (13.4 homicides per 100,000). The victimization rates for black children under the age of 5 have remained substantially higher than rates for white children and children from other races (11.3 homicides per 100,000). Yet, most significantly are the numbers from 2008. Black males aged 18 to 24 years-old had the highest homicide victimization rate (91.1 homicides per 100,000); this rate much lower than in the late 1980s and early 1990s, when the victimization rate reached 195.9 homicides per 100,000 (in 1993).

Racial profiling is yet another issue that disproportionately leads to disparities in the experiences of Black people in America, and is a subject of academic study (Free, 1996; Frerickson & Siljander, 2002; Weitzer & Tuch, 2002; Parker, 2008; Parker, Stults, & Lane, 2010), and media debate and scrutiny. Racial profiling is: a practice that presents a great danger to the fundamental principles of our Constitution. Racial profiling disproportionately targets people of color for investigation and enforcement, alienating communities from law enforcement, hindering community policing efforts, and causing law enforcement to lose credibility and trust among the people they are sworn to protect and serve. We rely on the police to protect us from harm and to promote fairness and justice in our communities. The despicable practice of racial profiling, however, has led countless people to live in fear and created a system of law enforcement that casts entire communities as suspect.

Moreover, racial profiling has been recognized by the international community as a significant factor which contributes to violations of human rights. They define it as:

the practice of police and other law enforcement officers relying, to any degree, on race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin as the basis for subjecting persons to investigatory activities or for determining whether an individual is engaged in criminal activity. (ACLU, 2009, p. 12)

There is an overall lack of accounting for the numbers of people who have been profiled and killed by law enforcement. Consequently, the outcomes of such activity has had a significant impact on the lives of victims, their families, and communities, while serving to undermine the ideals of freedom, equality and democracy, as they American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) asserts:

Policies and practices that appear race-neutral but disproportionately restrict the rights and freedoms of people of color are difficult to challenge, and establishing their discriminatory nature in the public consciousness and among policymakers is an uphill battle. (ACLU, 2009, p. 9)

In fact, several cases of profiling and violence have been magnified in the mainstream media, most notably the recent death of Trayvon Martin (Bandow, 2012) and Oscar Grant (Winter, 2010). Clearly, American citizens of all backgrounds should be concerned with policies, laws, and practices that threaten the lives of American citizens and that undermine the life, liberty and prosperity of people within our nation, specifically those in urban communities. The macro and micro-level forces that create such systems and that shape all our lives must be examined and interrogated.

Here, Spoken Word poetics (William-White, 2011a, 2011b; William-White & White, 2011; William-White, 2013) is utilized here to interpret and reflect on racialized violence and homicide in the United States. African American youth, particularly in urban communities, are disproportionately affected by violent crime, namely homicide when compared to other racial/ethnic groups. The impact of violence is heart-wrenching for families and communities; it undermines notions of personal and community safety, freedom, and equality within and between communities. It erodes the ideals of democracy in our country, particularly when racialized violence is under reported in the media, or ignored by media; and, when such violence is inadequately addressed by, or perpetrated at the hands of, law enforcement. As a performance narrative, this piece asks the question: How do we create communities of care, spaces for understanding and empathy, and utilize communities as sites for consciousness raising about the systems that perpetuate inequalities in the lives of people? This piece probes this question, and trumpets a call to end rampant violence in urban communities, promote safety and foster agency in ways that is responsive to the needs and interests of all citizens.

A Poetic Interpretation of Hope and Discontent

[Hook:]
What is the measure of Black worth and masculinity?
Normative ideations of ebony people
Don’t account for the complexities
That stem from nuanced, racialized realities
US society constructs and obscures
Black lives, personhood
and identity
pejoratively
regardless of whether one is in his own community
Thus, surveillance, containment
And execution
Not uncommon in this society
(For those minorities)

Within many cities there exists a surveillance culture
Black males, regardless of age, face a hostile structure
Doubly conscious of the policeman’s watch
A distrustful gaze
Black men often live this psychic torture
It shapes this age

One can be constructed as a hoodlum, a threat
a deviant convict SUSPECT
perhaps then there’s less outrage at the life lost through a violent death

Trayvonn⁴…Grant⁵…Byrd⁶…
Bell⁷--
(Johntue Caldwell)⁸ emblematic of a journey for many men, unfortunately Then comes the outcry from the community an absolute political necessity

Bring attention to an issue that has existed since the inception of this country working back from the Civil Rights struggles, Jim Crow days and of course U.S. slavery

The individual is dehumanized terrorized
Through violence
And tragedy
It’s a travesty!
Not from a plantation overseer
Or bounty hunter
But often by those from a City “pd”

Black life, today, minimized
Through corrosive power and authority
The tragic loss of life, a lesson for all to see in the 21st century creates knowledge and consciousness
Which should arouse a moral trajectory
And agency!

Certainly, it’s disheartening when one learns of such incidences They occur with such frequency, far too prevalent
And when amplified through the media issues arrest people’s consciousness Reveals wounds yet unhealed
Reflecting a plethora of historic precedents

Trayvon, for example, then becomes canonized
As a victim of racial violence
And the communities galvanize to protest the incident
Kendrick McDade -- another recent addition to the list
Churches amplify their calls for justice
And the momentum catches the winds that shape the historic moment
And statistically significant disparities
In frisking and searching is documented
The ACLU extensively reports this Through Prof. Ayers acknowledgement

The union of American Civil Liberties, too, shows the racial disparities
When black and brown drive through inner cities
Blacks twice as likely as whites to be arrested Four times more likely to experience the use or force or threat\textsuperscript{14}
Issues such as these must be acknowledged
So we can address and face it!

Racial profiling an important subject Like when Bobby Rush “dons hoodie” to protest on the House floor\textsuperscript{15}
An issue that affects scores more Using his position to advocate for crimes we should ALL abhor

He was poised to make a statement using his positionality Material effects consistent with affiliations he held previously Co-founded of the Illinois Black Panther Party
And a former member of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee\textsuperscript{16}
This issue – profiling, we surely must take seriously it occurs often enough reports framed by Amnesty\textsuperscript{17}

[Hook:]
What is the measure of Black worth and femininity?
Normative ideations of ebony people
Don’t account for the complexities
That stem from nuanced, racialized realities
US society constructs and obscures
Black lives, personhood
and identity
\textit{pejoratively} regardless of whether one is in \textit{her} own community
Thus, surveillance, containment
And execution
Not uncommon in this society
\textit{(For those minorities)}
I must also say the slaying of persons, no respecter of gender Or age,
unfortunately
But, the outcry from the community
an absolute political necessity
Bring attention to an issue that has existed since slavery

Chicago has been a cauldron for homicide and political neglect Too little done still to curtail urban violence Effectiveness of the Force?\textsuperscript{18} a point that is suspect

Children slain frequently Callously
Memorial walls\textsuperscript{19} erected by mothers to honor their memories
Families assemble openly to mourn and grieve Yet little is done that can soothe or offer reprieve
In our justice systems responsive and fair?
A question that many perceive Rekia Boyd’s\textsuperscript{20} family, I’m certain finds justice hard to conceive or BELIEVE

How do we create communities of love
And care
Reflecting enduring consciousness
On that is politically aware Where bigotry and snap decision-making does not threaten One’s life or WELFARE?

Listen folks
We must mobilize to secure all’s right in this democracy
Where all men are presumed to be of value and free
Free from indictment and judgment
Based on perceptions of pathology
Or inherent criminality
Where a hoodie can be an article of clothing
Not a symbol of threat or deviancy

These souls cry out:
What do you sense when you see me?
Does my skin obscure your view of my humanity?
A child, I once was Yet now a soul suspended in perpetuity
Another relic of urban violence
And US societal cruelty!

Let’s not forget all the many names of the slain candlelights dimmed where only souls remain
No airplay, OR remembrance day
Or media display

Were these lost lives in vain?
We await the just conviction of their perpetrators
A status still unclaimed

We should all be incensed about this
By slaughters of the innocent
People’s lives wrecked
Families destroyed
as though of no consequence
Are these repeat performances a coincidence
Or a reflection of a sociopolitical dissonance?
Where urban rage produces outrage
But leads to social paralysis?

It’s time for us to take a stand
As a country, let’s develop a MASTER PLAN
One that protects the lives of all in this land
We need some grassroots activism
Get all legislators’ attention
Engage each woman and man
In dialogue
To create a moral vision!
Anti-profiling legislation
And real attempts for just litigation

[Hook:]
What is the measure of Black worth and identity?
Normative ideations of ebony people
Don’t account for the complexities
That stem from nuanced, racialized realities
US society constructs and obscures
Black lives, personhood
and identity
pejoratively
regardless of whether one is in his own community
Thus, surveillance, containment
And execution
Not uncommon in this society
(For those minorities)

only emblematic of a journey for many,
UNFORTUNATELY
The outcry from the community
an absolute political necessity beyond the issue of safety but part of our moral trajectory
Ask yourself:
Am I ready to fight for social equity?
Notes

1 See http://www.bjs.gov/content/pub/pdf/htus8008.pdf
2 Racial demographics states that 82.9% of the population if White; 4.4% other American Indian, Native Alaskan, Asians, Native Hawaiians and other Pacific Islanders.
3 See http://www.aclu.org/racial-justice/racial-profiling
5 See http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2009/01/07/MNOV154P0R.DTL
7 See http://revcom.us/a/071/nyc-police-shooting-en.html
9 Police department
10 See http://www.thedailybeast.com/articles/2012/03/31/piers-morgan-vs-toure-how-the-cnn-host-blew-it.html
13 See the citing of Yale University Professor Ian Ayers on page 45 of http://www.aclu.org/files/pdfs/humanrights/cerd_finalreport.pdf
15 See http://www.washingtonpost.com/blogs/2chambers/post/bobby-rush-sometimes-decorum-has-to-take-a-back-seat/2012/03/28/gIQAks5zgS_blog.html#pagebreak
17 See http://www.amnestyusa.org/pdfs/rp_report.pdf
18 Force refers to police departments
20 See http://www.clutchmagonline.com/2012/03/justice-for-rekia-boyd-whos-rallying-for-murdered-black-women/

References

---

Lisa William-White is Associate Professor of Education in the Department of Graduate and Professional Studies at California State University Sacramento (CSUS). United States.

Contact Address: California State University Sacramento, Dept. Graduate and Professional Studies, 6000 J Street, Sacramento, CA 95819. United States of America. Email: lywwhite@csus.edu